Baby-Friendly Initiative Ontario

BFI Ontario Indigenous Land Acknowledgement

BFI Ontario recognizes that its work, and the work of the hospitals and community health services that are a part of BFI Ontario, take place across the traditional Indigenous lands and territories that many of us call Ontario. We are thankful to be able to work and live in these territories. As we gather, we remind ourselves to respect and nurture our relationship to this land, and give thanks to the many First Nations, Métis, and Inuit who have cared for these territories since time-immemorial. BFI Ontario is honoured to collaborate with Indigenous peoples, partners, and organizations. We encourage everyone at this meeting to learn about the Indigenous lands, treaties and peoples in and around the places where you live, to reflect on the enduring presence and resilience of Indigenous peoples, and to work together on building better relationships that support systemic change.

References

Canadian Association of University Teachers. (2021). Guide to acknowledging first peoples & traditional territory. https://www.caut.ca/content/guideacknowledging-first-peoples-traditional-territory

Centre for Teaching, Learning and Technology, University of British Columbia. (2016, October 18). Territory acknowledgement panel talk [Video]. YouTube. https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=lzqe2fh4Zdc

Deer, K. (2021, October 21). What's wrong with land acknowledgements, and how to make them better. CBCnews. https://www.cbc.ca/news/indigenous/landacknowledgements-what-s-wrong-with-them-1.6217931

Shahzad, R. (2017, July 15). What is the significance of acknowledging the Indigenous land we stand on? CBCnews. https://www.cbc.ca/news/canada/toronto/territorial-acknowledgementsindigenous-1.4175136

Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada. (2012). Truth and reconciliation commission of Canada: Calls to action. https://ehprnh2mwo3.exactdn.com/wpcontent/uploads/2021/01/Calls_to_Action_English2.pdf